

FRIDAY'S MATCHMAKING

By Lilian Paschal

Copyright, 1903, by the
S. S. McClure Company

"Down, Friday, down, sir!" But it was too late, and Hill's white ducks, fresh from the laundry, were ready to go back again to the same cleansing institution.

Friday's paws were very moist and black from his delighted investigations into the country puddles back from the shore past which they three were strolling, and Friday's mistress turned a pair of very moist black eyes in sexed reproach upon him as he backed wonderingly away from her upraised hand.

It is certainly dismaying to the canine mind to be praised and fed with luscious caramels one day for protecting his mistress from insult, as had been the case yesterday when a stranger had rudely accosted her in the daisy field, and then to be punished on the next day for the same gallant service. He had, as he thought, faithfully performed the same duty when she shrunk from this man's imploring arms. Friday was quite sure he had heard her say, "Please go away!"

It drew him at once from that interesting front door of Mrs. Woodchuck's. It was a call to the depths of his dog-lest chivalry. And here was his reward—to be beaten and in disgrace. Friday thought it a very puzzling world.

To be sure, this man wore clean white clothes, and the one yesterday had on dirty, ragged ones. He had not noticed that in his righteous rush to the rescue. Come to think of it, he himself, with his white, silky fur coat, was very much more of a gentleman than that mangy black and tan of the Johnsons.

As he recognized his error in mistaking a gentleman for a tramp he crept back for pardon. He offered the best apology possible in dog language—kissed the hand of his mistress and then in a penitent whine implored the man to forgive him his mistake, which he regretted with all his soul in his big brown eyes.

Eugene Hill was a gentleman, and he accepted Friday's retraction as man to man.

"Never mind, old fellow," he said kindly, and the dog noticed that the hand patting his head in good fellowship was trembling violently. "I'd kill any fellow myself that dared to harm a hair of her bonny head—only you say, she must have him at all costs. Her cousin cavalier believed implicitly in the divine right of queens. He took desperate measures, and Hill suddenly felt the dog's teeth in his sleeve, while more glaring mud silhouettes were being planted on his back to match the ones in front.

"Oh, it's me you want, is it?" Hill understood now, and a light came into his face. He did not need the eager assistance of the four footed Mercury who wished to drag him bodily back to where a very rosy faced divinity was digging her parasol in the sand.

"Here he is!" barked Friday, sure now of his well earned pardon.

"You look like the ten of spades," the girl's demure eyes were raised to Hill's face, sparkling with mischief—and something else.

The man looked into them, and a cloud of pain swept over his face like a shadow. He could not read the sweet cipher in her eyes. Before he met Katharine no code had been needed to read the "books in women's looks." Their glances were messages of unalloyed invitation to the son of old Samuel Hill, the millionaire.

"Don't play with me now, Katharine," he pleaded. "Did you really send Friday for me?"

She was screening her face with the ruffled sunshade and appeared not to hear.

"I could forgive the ninety-three suits of clothes," she mused judicially, "though when there are so many poor people in the world, cold and ragged!"

"And for whose comfort those very clothes were bought," he interrupted. "The papers got it twisted. The suits weren't tailor made for me, but just good, warm hand-me-downs for needy convalescents at the hospital, though the papers didn't get that side of it. You see, I sent them—er—anonymous—ly because—well, I hate publicity in that sort of thing," he blurted out as shamefacedly as though confessing a crime.

Katharine felt a quick rush of something stirring in her heart, a sweet something that softened her bright eyes to tenderness. She lowered her tent of chiffon, lest he should see, and brought up the other reason—the real one.

"But I can't forgive your making love to me!"

"I couldn't help it," he apologized for that crime impatiently.

"When you are engaged to Clara Mack," she finished.

"I'm not engaged to anybody," he denied indignantly. "And if you'll only be engaged to me, darling!"

There were two under the chiffon tent now, and but no one saw the red, not even Friday, their canine Cupid, for a ruffled sunshade covers a multitude of things.

Sponge Fishing.

The sponge is an animal and not a vegetable, as some state. It breathes and when in the water is filled with mucus. The sponge in its familiar state is only a carcass. Sponges are known to grow at a depth of 200 feet and live even deeper doubtless. At the depth of fifty feet they can be forked by an expert fisher, but at a greater depth they must be got by diving. Sponge fishers use a glass by which sponges can be seen growing on the bottom. The instrument is in the nature of a pair with a glass bottom attached to the bow of the boat. It is submerged so as to steady the vision, which would otherwise be contorted by the waves. The water where sponges grow is very clear, and the bottom can be seen at a great depth. The home of the sponge fishing industry is in Greece and is centuries old. A large percentage of the Mediterranean sponges comes from the island of Hydra. Some, however, come from off the coast of Tripoli. A few sponges come from the faroff land of Madagascar. There are two months in each year when sponge fishing is practically abandoned. This is in August and September, the hurricane months. During the other ten months the industry flourishes.

A Tale Bearing Marble.

Lord Kelvin once surprised his class by the quick and amusing manner in which he solved a problem on sound. In the midst of an experiment Lord Kelvin had ceased lecturing and was silently watching along with most of the students the progress of an experiment. There was a dead silence, which was suddenly and rudely broken by the sound of a marble which an inattentive student had purposely dropped and which continued to roll and drop, drop, down all the tiers of benches till it reached the ground floor. Meanwhile Lord Kelvin had quickly turned around and observed where the marble emerged on to the floor. He counted back the number of times he had heard it drop and then announced: "Mr. X, of the seventh tier, you may report to me after the lecture."

The eminent scientist had correctly spotted the culprit.

A Lazy Artist's Wit.

An Austrian prince once sent his servant to a painter remarkable for his idleness as well as skill and gave him a picture to copy. It was the painting of an old farmhouse. In a few days the servant went to see what progress had been made and on his return informed the prince that all was done but one chimney, on which the painter was then employed. A week passed, and the picture was not returned. The prince then resolved to go himself. He did so and found the artist still at the unfinished chimney. "How is this," said the prince severely, "all this time employed on one chimney?" "I have been obliged to do and undo it several times," said the artist. "For what reason?" asked the prince. "Because," said the artist coolly, "I found that it smoked."

MENU OF THE TURKS

DISHES THAT COULD BE ADOPTED BY AMERICAN HOUSEWIVES.

Viands That Are at Once Appetizing, Nutritious and Inexpensive—Popularity of Vegetables and Sweets. The National Dish.

Some of the dishes found on Turkish tables might well be adopted by the American housewife, being appetizing and inexpensive and easily prepared from articles that are to be found here in great abundance.

Turks do not care for salads, but prefer meat, fish, vegetables and sweet dishes. The Bosphorus furnishes a great variety of excellent fish, among them the red mullet, oysters and mussels, but the Turks have no idea of the choice of cuts and simply ask for so many okas, caring nothing so that they get meaty pieces with few bones. Corned beef, roast beef, steak—these are unknown. Mutton, beef, a little veal, fowls and game are eaten. Pork is "the unutterable flesh."

Breakfast with the Turks of all classes consists of a cup of coffee and bread. A piece of cheese rolled into the fat pancake is eaten by the laborers. This is sometimes exchanged for cakes that are much like pretzels, only larger and not so hard. In the fruit season different kinds of fruit are added. Black bread made of unbolled rye flour is sold everywhere and when fresh is delicious. With a few grapes, a piece of the native cheese and a cup of coffee the richest man is satisfied.

With all fish, lobsters and many meats a sort of salad dressing is served made of garlic, oil, breadcrumbs and vinegar, all bruised to a cream, with caviar or cucumber. Mussels are much larger than in this country. They are washed, steamed until they open, then filled with rice, chopped onion and pepper and butter, packed closely in a vessel and baked an hour.

Turks make few soups, as they prefer solid food, but sardines, anchovies and salted olives or pistachio nuts are eaten before meals as appetizers. Of vegetables, which enter largely into their diet, the favorite is the tomato, and scarcely any dish is considered complete without it, though they never eat this vegetable raw. To preserve tomatoes for winter use they boil them until the skins are loose, then pass them through colanders, after which they throw salt into the pulp. This causes it to settle, and the water is poured off while the residue is put into thin bags and hung in the shade. The next day it is spread on flat surfaces to dry. Later it is cut into squares and laid in covered jars. This process retains the taste and qualities of the tomato better than canning, and a little water makes the pulp moist again.

Potatoes, a taste for which is an acquired one with the Turk, are first boiled, mashed with eggs and a little flour, then made into cakes and fried. Beans and lima beans are boiled with tomatoes and butter and sometimes onions. Squash is sliced and fried or stuffed with mince meat, onions and boiled rice, and then baked. Large cucumbers are also stuffed with minced meats and baked or are eaten raw with salt. One good stew is made of mutton and green peas. Another has all sorts of vegetables, like an Irish stew.

Eggplant is cooked in many ways, some of them palatable and good. One recipe is called inambalide, which means that the man for whom the dish first was made fainted with delight at its excellence. To make it, cut slits in the sides of the eggplant and insert a forcement of onion and minced chicken in the cavities. The strips of cloth around and fry thoroughly in boiling fat. Another way is to substitute eggplant for potato in a stew. Tomatoes should also be added.

Moussaka, another and better form, calls for one large eggplant, sliced rather thick, without peeling. Have a quart of tomatoes freshly peeled or canned and one pound of minced beef. Fry the beef until it separates, set aside while the eggplant is being fried, then put alternate layers of meat, eggplant and tomatoes in a deep dish; season and bake in a slow oven one hour.

Another delicious dish results from placing sliced onions, tomatoes and ship's bread or soda biscuit in layers, with a generous piece of butter, in a covered dish. Bake slowly four hours. Pilaf, the national dish of Turkey, is served invariably at every dinner. Rice always forms the foundation, and the most popular variety is that where nothing but butter, tomatoes and rice is used. Take three-quarters of a pound of Carolina or Egyptian rice, wash until perfectly clean and while still wet place in a pan with one-quarter of a pound of butter. Stir over the fire until the rice has absorbed the butter and become a light golden color. Add the rice to three pints of strained tomato juice, boil the whole up once, then draw aside to cook, without stirring, for twenty-five minutes. When done, melt another quarter of a pound of butter, and when the pilaf is dished up pour it over the top. Each kernel should be separate. The color will be a rich light brown.

Yalanje-dolma is a popular dish with foreigners as well as Turks. Scald some fresh green grape leaves. Take a half pound of rice and fry in butter as for pilaf. Mince some onion and parsley very fine and add them to the rice with salt and pepper. Stuff each leaf with the mixture, fastening the little bundles with cloves. Lay them in a kettle, the opening downward, keep them in place and just enough water to keep them from burning. Simmer for three-quarters of an hour.—New York Tribune.

A BIT OF PANTOMIME.

Max O'Rell's Opinion of Four Peoples Given in Gestures.

"When Max O'Rell came to Montreal some years ago," said a man from that city to a Detroit Journal contributor, "we fixed up a little joke on him. We had noticed how gracefully he could unite a caustic criticism with a compliment, a faculty that enabled him to say the sharpest things without offending the people he was criticizing. We were going to put the faculty to a test."

"We had him lunch with us, and there were at the table besides himself an Englishman, a Scotchman, an Irishman and a French-Canadian. When we got our guest off his guard we demanded an honest opinion of the different races we represented. As the opinion had to be given in the presence of all four, the situation for him was a rather delicate one. But it never seemed to trouble him, and he gave his opinion without a moment's hesitation."

"The Scotchman," he said, and he clinched his right hand tightly and pretended to try to force it open with his left. "The Englishman"—and he went through the same performance, opening the hand at the end after an apparent struggle. "The Irishman"—and he held out his hand wide open, with the palm upward. "The Frenchman"—and he made a motion with both hands as if he were emptying them on the table.

"There was not a word of explanation, but we all understood thoroughly and had a hearty laugh. Max O'Rell had maintained his reputation."

A Lincoln Joke.

One of Lincoln's visitors in the early days of his administration says:

"He walked into the corridor with us, and as he bade us goodbye and thanked — for what he had told him, he again brightened up for a moment and asked him in an abrupt kind of way, laying his hand as he spoke with a queer but not unkind familiarity on his shoulder. 'You haven't such a thing as a postmaster in your pocket, have you?'"

"— stared at him in astonishment and I thought a little in alarm, as if he suspected a sudden attack of insanity. Then Mr. Lincoln went on: 'You see, it seems to be kind of unnatural that you shouldn't have at least a postmaster in your pocket. Everybody I've seen for days past has had foreign ministers and collectors and all kinds, and I thought you couldn't have got in here without having at least a postmaster get into your pocket.'—The True Abraham Lincoln."

A Brave Woman Sailor.

There are many instances on record of women sailing ships into port single handed when compelled thereto by some exceptional stress of circumstances. A typical case is that of the brigantine Moorburg, cholera stricken in the autumn of 1877 while on a voyage from China to Australia. The only one that escaped the pestilence was the captain's wife, and she was handicapped by having a baby in arms to suckle and attend to. Nevertheless she navigated the vessel into Brisbane, a voyage of some seven weeks' duration, reefing, steering and generally performing the work of a full crew, while tenderly nursing the sick during her spare moments.—London Tit-Bits.

Very Remarkable Cure of Diarrhoea.

"About six years ago for the first time in my life I had a sudden and severe attack of diarrhoea," says Mrs. Alice Miller of Morgan, Texas. "I got temporary relief, but it came back again and again, and for six long years I have suffered more misery and agony than I can tell. It was worse than death. My husband spent hundreds of dollars for physicians' prescriptions and treatment without avail. Finally we moved to Bosque county, our present home, and one day I happened to see an advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with a testimonial of a man who had been cured by it. The case was so similar to my own that I concluded to try the remedy. The result was wonderful. I could hardly realize that I was well again, or believe it could be so after having suffered so long, but that one bottle of medicine, costing but a few cents, cured me." For sale by Kiesau Drug Co.

Foley's Honey and Tar is without doubt the greatest throat and lung remedy. Refuse substitutes. Kiesau Drug Co.

Rheumatism

"THE PAIN KING."

Those who have ever felt its keen, cutting pains, or witnessed the intense suffering of others, know that Rheumatism is torture, and that it is rightly called "The King of Pain."

All do not suffer alike. Some are suddenly seized with the most excruciating pains, and it seems every muscle and joint in the body was being torn asunder. Others feel only occasional slight pains for weeks or months, when a sudden change in the weather or exposure to damp, chilly winds or night air brings on a fierce attack, lasting for days perhaps, and leaving the patient with a weakened constitution or crippled and deformed for all time.

An acid, polluted condition of the blood is the cause of every form and variety of Rheumatism, Muscular, Articular, Acute, Chronic, Inflammatory and Sciatic, and the blood must be purged and purified before there is an end to your aches and pains. External applications, the use of liniments and plasters, do much toward temporary relief, but such treatment does not reach the real cause or cleanse the diseased blood; but S. S. S., the greatest of all blood purifiers and tonics, does cure Rheumatism by antiodotting and neutralizing the poisonous acids and building up the weak and sluggish blood. It is safe and reliable in all forms of Rheumatism. It makes the old acid blood rich, and the pain-tortured muscles and joints are relieved, the shattered nerves are made strong, and the entire system is invigorated and toned up by the use of this great vegetable remedy.

If you have Rheumatism, write us, and our physicians will furnish without charge any information desired, and we will mail free our book on Rheumatism.

Catarrh of the Stomach.

When the stomach is overloaded; when food is taken into it that fails to digest, it decays and inflames the mucous membrane, exposing the nerves, and causing the glands to secrete mucus. Instead of the natural juices of digestion, this is called catarrh of the stomach. For years I suffered with catarrh of the stomach, caused by indigestion. Doctors and medicines failed to benefit me until I used Kodol Dyspepsia Cure.—J. R. Rhea, Coppell, Tex. Sold by The Kiesau Drug Co.

A case came to light that for preexistent and unmerciful torture has perhaps never been equaled. Joe Golobick of Colusa, Calif., writes: "For 15 years I endured insufferable pain from rheumatism and nothing relieved me though I tried every thing known. I came across Electric Bitters and it's the greatest medicine on earth for that trouble. A few bottles of it completely

How are your kidneys? It is dangerous to delay when the kidneys are sick. Kidney Etes are the most wonderful cure for all kidney and backache complaints. The Kiesau Drug Co.

Treat Your Kidneys for Rheumatism.

When you are suffering from rheumatism, the kidneys must be attended to at once so that they will eliminate the uric acid from the blood. Foley's Kidney Cure is the most effective remedy for this purpose. R. T. Hopkins of Polar, Wis., says, "After unsuccessfully doctoring three years for rheumatism with the best doctors, I tried Foley's Kidney Cure and it cured me. I cannot speak too highly of this great medicine. Kiesau Drug Co.

FOXY GRANDPA

Including all the merry pictures contained in the two volumes, entitled "Adventures of Foxy Grandpa" and "Further Adventures of Foxy Grandpa."

Mr. Schultz said to me one day at lunch: "What do you think of a series of comic drawings dealing with a grandfather and his two grandsons?" "Let the grandfather be the clever one of the trio. In most of the other cases the young folk have been smarter than the old people upon whom they played their jokes. Let's reverse it." The next morning he came to my office with sketches for half a dozen series, and with the name "Foxy Grandpa" in his head.

The success of the series in the New York Herald was instantaneous. For who has not heard of "Foxy Grandpa" and "Bunny?"

The jolly old gentleman, dear to grown people as well as children, might almost be called the Mr. Pickwick of comic pictures.
